ROOTED IN SOUTH JORDAN READY TO SERVE

Hello, South Jordan friends and neighbors,

I first moved here in 1986, just before starting kindergarten, and was fortunate to grow up in South Jordan from my first day of school through graduating from Bingham High. Nearly a decade ago, my husband Brian and I returned to raise our family, and we're grateful to call this community home.

Over the years, I've watched South Jordan grow and change. Those experiences have shown me how important it is to have leaders who understand the impact of growth and are committed to keeping our city a place where both families and businesses can thrive.

For more than 20 years, I've worked in marketing and communications, bringing people together, listening with care, and turning ideas into results. With a degree in Public Relations from BYU and an MBA from the University of Utah, I've developed the leadership and problem-solving skills I'm ready to put to work for our community.

The things that matter most to me are simple: keeping neighborhoods safe, supporting families and residents, and encouraging thoughtful economic development so families and local businesses can succeed together.

Living near the new ballpark, I see firsthand the opportunities and challenges that come with growth. That's why I believe we need voices on the City Council who will protect what makes South Jordan special while also representing those experiencing growth most directly.

As I've walked neighborhoods and met with residents, I've been reminded how deeply people care about this city. Those conversations reinforce the need for fresh perspectives and leaders who truly listen. That is the kind of leadership I am committed to providing.

I'm also eager to use my professional background to strengthen economic development, keeping more of our South Jordan dollars in South Jordan and easing the pressure to raise property taxes.

South Jordan is more than where I live. It's where I grew up, where my children are growing up, and where I hope future generations will thrive. I would be honored to earn your trust and your vote for City Council. Together, we can keep South Jordan strong while shaping a future that reflects the values and voices of our community.

TRUSTED LEADERSHIP, PROVEN SUPPORT

Leadership you can believe in — endorsed by our community's trusted voices.

"I worked with Rachel for more than 17 years. She's a strong communicator who brings people together and turns good ideas into meaningful action. She has my vote for City Council."

Ray Pickup

Retired CEO, South Jordan District 3 Resident

"We need leaders like Rachel who bring fresh perspectives while honoring our values, making public safety a top priority, and supporting those who protect and serve our community."

Scott Stephenson

Former Chair of the Board of Pardon and Parole, South Jordan District 3 Resident

"I believe Rachel will be a wonderful city council member. I've watched her personally serve in community projects and other activities where she has demonstrated a remarkable ability to communicate, get things done, and interact with people respectfully and with kindness. She'll be good for South Jordan."

Dr. Dale Hull

Executive Director, South Jordan Resident

"Rachel is a thoughtful leader who genuinely cares about her community. She listens closely, engages deeply, and has the conviction to stand up for what truly matters. I know she'll bring that same heart and principled leadership to the City Council."

Peggy Larsen

Utah Board President, National Association of Corporate Directors
